COLLABORATION FOR THE VARIOUS VERSIONS THAT INCLUDE GUITAR

Over the years, I have created numerous arrangements of my composition, "Danzas Latinoamericanas", which I originally wrote for two cellos. This process has provided a wonderful opportunity to explore various facets of my piece while also serving as an invaluable learning experience. It has allowed me to deepen my understanding of instruments with which I was previously less familiar.

When arranging the composition for a new ensemble, I must consider how playable or idiomatic certain passages are for each instrument, along with their technical capabilities and limitations. This knowledge guides me in adapting the music to suit those instruments. Sometimes, the process is straightforward, but other times it requires reimagining and rewriting melodies or creating entirely new textures.

For a composer, it is a true blessing to have friends who play different instruments and are willing to share their expertise. The various versions that include guitar, more than any other ones, are the result of numerous enriching conversations and interactions. I am deeply grateful to my friends who helped me gain insight into the technical nuances of their instruments, tested passages for me, and patiently answered my questions. On occasion, while reading, performing, or recording this piece, they introduced ideas that enhanced the work beautifully. With their permission, I incorporated some of those ideas into these versions.

These wonderful collaborators include:

Michal Shein
Giovanna Buccarella
Aaron Larget-Caplan
Carl Straussner
Adam Levin
Francesco Diodovich
Silvan De Smit
Christopher Schoelen

NOTE: The process behind transcribing “Pan de Azúcar”, the second movement, for guitar differs notably from that of the other two movements. That movement was first transcribed completely by the great guitar virtuoso Francesco Diodovich. Later, I adapted and rewrote parts of his transcription to make it accessible to a broader range of performers. As with the other two movements, my guitar transcription was refined by the ideas and advice of my friends mentioned above.

Thank you!

III. Atardecer Tapatío

by José L. Elizondo

PERFORMANCE NOTES: Even though this piece is notated using 6/8 meter, the music actually alternates between 6/8 and 3/4 meter throughout the piece, as is characteristic in this type of Mexican dance. Performers are kindly encouraged to be aware of those meter changes that add an element of playfulness to the piece. Whenever possible, the beams of the note groups reflect the "perceived" meter. The tempo should be the same, steady and regular, throughout the entire piece with the only exception of the very last couple of measures, where a "ritardando" is indicated. It is very important for this type of dance to be very light, joyful and worry-free.

The tempo of the entire piece is steady. The only section of the piece where the tempo should be slowed down is the very last 2 measures, to help the ending more convincing, particularly after all the accumulated energy in the last 4 measures.
